For Lego fans, building competition just clicked

Building blocks. Ian Coffey was named the new Lego Master Model Builder of Boston.

A 26-year-old man with a love for Legos is leaving his job at the New York Senate to build a colorful new future out of the popular plastic bricks.

"It's a very drastic change," said Ian Coffey, whose enthusiasm for Legos is impressive.

The Albany, N.Y., resident on Sunday won a two-day building competition at the Boston Public Library, put on by LEGOLAND Discovery Center.

More than 60 Lego enthusiasts put their skills and creativity to the test Saturday over multiple rounds of construction challenges. Coffey was one of 10 to make it to Sunday's finals. With his victory comes a full-time, salaried job as a Lego Master Model Builder.

"When they called my name ... I was elated. I thought, 'How could this be happening to me?' I'm so happy," Coffey said.

"I've always loved building with Lego bricks. They're incredible. My basement is covered with Legos. It's a Lego city with Lego skyscrapers."

In two weeks, Coffey will relocate to the Hub and start training for his new job at LEGOLAND Discovery Center Boston, which opens in May at Assembly Row in Somerville. Part of his responsibilities will include constructing new features, exhibitions and models at the 44,000-square-foot center, which will be the first and only attraction of its kind in New England.

"Honestly, this has been my dream job forever. I applied to [the Lego Group] in Denmark when I was first out of college, but didn't hear back," said Coffey. "So when I heard of this opportunity, bells and whistles went off, and I said, 'This is it.'"

Driver dies after rear-ending MBTA bus

There were no signs that the driver applied his brakes, a T official said. / JULIE LONCICH, WCVB

A Roxbury man died on Sunday, hours after his car struck an MBTA bus on North Maine Street in Randolph.

The 24-year-old, who as of press time had not been named, drove his 2007 Infiniti into a Rt. 240 bus around 10:15 a.m. as the bus was stopped at a bus stop, according to MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo.

He did not show any signs of braking prior to striking the bus, Pesaturo said.

Nine bus passengers reported neck and back discomfort and were taken to various South Shore hospitals, Pesaturo said. Officials said none of those injuries were considered life-threatening.

"It was so hard. We were all shaken up. It was terrible. I was wondering what was going on," one female bus passenger told NECN.

Transit Police detectives are currently investigating the facts and circumstances leading to the accident, and said they were not releasing any more information until today.

The bus was towed to an MBTA garage for damage assessment, Pesaturo said.

Photographs taken at the scene and published on Twitter showed the severity of the crash, with the Infiniti's mangled front end smashed against the rear of the bus.

Cabbie has car stolen in Charlestown

A cab driver had his taxi stolen by an allegedly belligerent man who had gotten into a fight with a store employee at a Charlestown Tedeschi early Sunday.

After the fight, the man got into the cab and requested a ride, but the driver refused, saying the man was drunk and had just been in a fight. The man and driver began to struggle before the man took off with the taxi. It was eventually located in Dorchester and police arrested the man. METRO

BFD: Fatal fire is not suspicious

A two-alarm fire that ripped through a Hyde Park home, leaving an elderly woman dead, does not appear to be suspicious, the fire department said on Sunday.

Fire crews were called to 40 Colchester St. just before 8 p.m. Saturday for a report of a fire. When crews arrived at the single family home there was heavy fire showing.

An elderly woman was taken to a hospital, but later died.

The fire began in the basement and the cause was under investigation. METRO

Rapes reported at Stonehill College

The rape of a woman inside a Stonehill College dorm is the third sexual assault to take place on the Easton campus so far this school year.

The female student came forward last week and reported that she had been raped Dec. 7, according to the Enterprise.

The student said she was raped by a fellow student, but so far has not sought to press charges, a school spokeswoman said.

Mohegan Sun, colleges partner on training

Workforce. Mohegan Sun and local community colleges will work to train potential casino employees.

While its fate in Massachusetts is up in the air, Mohegan Sun is still pushing to secure a spot in the state by announcing a partnership with Boston-area community colleges to train potential workers.

The Connecticut-based casino operator announced on Sunday in a news release that it is partnering with three Boston-area community colleges to help train the potentially thousands of casino workers that will be needed.

Mohegan Sun is in competition with Wynn Resorts for the only Greater Boston casino license. Both sides presented final pitches to the state gaming commission last week, and a license isn't expected to be awarded until May.

The agreement means that Mohegan Sun will work with Bunker Hill Community College, North Shore Community College and Roxbury Community College to create a workforce development plan that will include curriculum and worker training programs in areas such as tables games, casino accounting and materials management. Mohegan Sun said that its casino would create 4,000 permanent jobs.

The colleges are part of the Massachusetts Casino Careers Training Institute, which is a consortium made up of the state's 15 community colleges and workforce development agencies. Mohegan Sun was one of the casino operators to sign a similar agreement last year when it had plans to build a casino in Palmer before a failed vote.

Quoted

"We look forward to preparing students for careers in this newly developing area of the state's economy."

Pam Eddinger
Bunker Hill Community College president

"This agreement represents a significant opportunity for our students and the future workforce of the Commonwealth," North Shore Community College President Patricia Gentile said in a statement.

Mohegan Sun has proposed a $1.3 billion resort casino on 42 acres of land on Suffolk Downs in Revere. It still faces a new citywide vote next month.

Grafton teens face intimidation charges

Seven Grafton teens were arrested on felony charges of witness intimidation for allegedly threatening a young violent crime victim through social media and other means.

Grafton police on Friday said that they charged the teens, who range in age from 14 to 19, with witness intimidation after an investigation.

Earlier this month, officers spoke to the mother of the 15-year-old victim, who had also been the victim of a violent crime. The officers learned that the teen had been subjected to "repeated and ongoing harassment and intimidation, physically and through social media," by the group, Grafton police said. After an investigation that included witness interviews and a review of social media sites, police charged the teens. METRO

State of the Union

Obama to use speech to offer election-year agenda for Democrats

President Barack Obama may not say it in his State of the Union speech this week, but part of his underlying message will be: Please vote for Democrats in the November elections.

Obama's big speech on Tuesday will be his sixth foray into the House of Representatives chamber to lay out his policy priorities for the year.

This year's address is critical to forming a narrative on which Democrats can campaign this year. And Obama wants to bolster his standing after a rocky end-of-the-year controversy over the botched rollout of his signature health care law, and the tumult surrounding a government shutdown.

Obama has seized on income inequality in America as the main theme of his State of the Union speech, which went through its usual draft process over the weekend.

He will promote his demand that Congress raise the minimum wage and call for steps to increase jobs at the lower rungs of the economic ladder at a time when the stock market is soaring, but overall job growth is tepid.

The White House sees raising incomes as a key to building up the middle class and getting more Americans out of poverty and into better lives.

The implicit message, that Democrats stand for the middle class, should help them as they gird for what could be difficult congressional elections in November. REUTERS

Police identify gunman in Maryland mall shooting

Shots fired. The mall was crowded with weekend shoppers; many took shelter.

The attack in Columbia followed a shooting at a New Jersey mall in November in which a gunman fired at least six shots without hitting anyone. / GETTY IMAGES

The gunman who shot and killed two people at a Maryland mall was a 19-year-old man who lived with his mother in the city of College Park and arrived at the shopping center in a taxi about an hour before opening fire, police said on Sunday.

But a day after Saturday's shootings, police could provide no immediate insight into why Darion Marcus Aguilar killed a young man and a young woman at the mall in Columbia, Md., about 20 miles west of Baltimore, before apparently killing himself.

Police have yet to find any ties between Aguilar and the two people he killed, employees at a skate shop at the mall, Howard County Police Chief Bill McMahon told a Sunday morning news conference.

"We do know that one of our victims also lived in College Park," McMahon said. "We don't know if there's any connection there or whether that's merely coincidental."

Aguilar fired six to eight shots from a 12-gauge shotgun, killing Brianna Benlolo, 21, of College Park, and Tyler Johnson, 25, of Mount Airy, Md., police said. Both were employees of Zumiez, the skate shop where the shooting took place. A third person on a lower floor of the mall suffered a gunshot wound to the foot, and four more people were hurt in the ensuing chaos. REUTERS

Retailer. Michaels crafts stores warns of possible payment card breach

Michaels Companies Inc., the biggest U.S. arts and crafts retailer, said it is investigating a possible security breach on its payment card network and advised customers to check their financial statements for fraudulent activity.

If confirmed, it would mark the second known data breach since 2011 at Michaels, which is preparing to sell shares in an initial public offering.

"We are concerned there may have been a data security attack on Michaels that may have affected our customers' payment card information," Michaels Chief Executive Chuck Rubin said in a statement on Saturday. "We are taking aggressive action to determine the nature and scope of the issue."

The warning comes in the wake of a massive data breach at Target Corp. over the holiday shopping season, and suggests that hackers may be attacking U.S. retailers in a spree the extent of which is yet to be fully understood. REUTERS

Snowden: NSA engages in industrial espionage

Greed. Edward Snowden says the U.S. will take any intelligence regardless of value to national security.

The U.S. National Security Agency is involved in industrial espionage and will grab any intelligence it can get its hands on regardless of its value to national security, former NSA contractor Edward Snowden told a German TV network.

In text released ahead of a lengthy interview that aired on Sunday, ARD TV quoted Snowden saying the NSA does not limit its espionage to issues of national security and he cited German engineering firm Siemens as one target.

"If there's information at Siemens that's beneficial to national interests — even if it doesn't have anything to do with national security — then they'll take that information nevertheless," Snowden said, according to ARD, which recorded the interview win Russia where he has claimed asylum.

Snowden also told the German public broadcasting network he no longer has possession of any documents on NSA activities and has turned everything he had over to select journalists.

He said he did not have any control over the publication of the information, per ARD. REUTERS

Snowden won't return without amnesty

Edward Snowden would be willing to enter talks with U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder to negotiate his return to the United States but not without a guarantee of amnesty, his legal adviser said on Sunday.

Jesselyn Radack said she was glad Holder indicated last week he would talk to lawyers for the former U.S. spy agency contractor to negotiate his return from Moscow, but that Snowden would need better protection.

Dog hugs, not drugs

Zac Efron, who completed a stint in rehab last year for problems with cocaine and alcohol, is back on the junket circuit, this time looking happy, healthy and game for chihuahua kisses. Here he is on the set of Univision's "Despierta America" to promote his new movie "That Awkward Moment" on Friday in Miami, Fla.

Bieber's housekeeper talks 'drugs' and 'hangers-on'

Let's all take the following with a great, big grain of salt as you know that any housekeeper of Justin Bieber's is going to sign an iron-clad confidentiality agreement before she or he even steps into his hormone-ravaged mansion(s). But perhaps Tatiana Voziouk, who claims to be Bieber's former housekeeper, is either being paid so much to gab to Britain's Sunday People that it's worth it or she is just very, very worried about her former boss and wants him to get help, non-disclosure be damned. (That, or she is just an entirely made-up person by the tabloid to help keep the clicks coming, which is the theory I'd put my money on.)

Anyway, queue the force-fed quotes! "I'm terrified he'll become the next Michael Jackson. If he doesn't act now, I will hear one day that he has passed away. It is heartbreaking," Voziouk said. "The drugs and hangers-on are turning Justin into a zombie." Voziouk, who began working for Bieber in 2012 and was recently let go, says she witnessed plenty of prescription drugs, marijuana and other substances on the premises.

"I was always picking up joint butts and stubs from the kitchen, lounge and pool area where they had been thrown," she says, adding that she'd voiced concerns about Bieber's decline to his mother and manager, but to no avail. "Justin was once a sweatheart — kind, considerate and a talented boy, and now I am concerned for him," she says. "He is now a lost boy."

Justin Bieber fans show their support at his hotel in Miami on Friday. Bieber left the U.S. on Saturday to hit up Punta Charne, a beach town on the Gulf of Panama, with his new gal pal Chantel Jeffries. / RADCLIFFE, BAUER-GRIFFIN, GC IMAGES

Cuaron's Oscar basically assured after his DGA win

The Directors Guild of America bestowed Alfonso Cuaron top honors for his film "Gravity" on Saturday night. Cuaron has already picked up a Golden Globe for the film and is, of course, nominated for a Best Director Oscar.

So here is where we ask the requisite, "So what does this mean for Cuaron's Oscar chances?" Well, if it weren't already obvious that he was going to win — beating out the closest he has to a rival, "12 Years a Slave" helmsman Steve McQueen — this seals it.

Only seven times in its 65 year history has the winner of the DGA for Outstanding Directorial Achievement in Feature Film not gone on to win the Oscar equivalent. Moreover, only 13 times has the DGA winner's film not won Best Picture.

'We wouldn't be here if it weren't for Paul and Ringo'

Grammy Awards. The Academy of Arts and Sciences continues to award inter-generational collaboration.

Pharrell Williams, Daft Punk and Nile Rodgers reached across the generation gap. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

While the people behind the Grammys have increasingly focused attention on bridging generation gaps with their programming — pairing old and young performers together on live musical collaborations — the awards presented at the beginning of the 56th Annual Grammy Awards also followed this formula.

Daft Punk, Pharrell Williams and Nile Rodgers won the Best Pop Duo/Group Performance Grammy for "Get Lucky," a victory which makes perfect sense for the Academy of Arts and Sciences, since it already pairs veterans with new blood.

This theme was clearest when Dave Grohl, Paul McCartney, Krist Novoselic and Pat Smear won the award for Best Rock Song.

"I have to say that we wouldn't be here if it weren't for Paul and for Ringo," said Grohl.

Representing the young blood, Macklemore and Ryan Lewis were the first to step up to the podium to claim an award during the televised ceremony (they had already won three before the cameras were rolling).

"We made this album without a record label," said Macklemore, beaming with a big smile as he accepted the Grammy for Best New Artist. The duo would later be instrumental in one of the evening's most poignant moments. As they performed their single, "Same Love," with Mary Lambert and Trombone Shorty, more than 30 couples (some gay, some straight) took their wedding vows as Queen Latifah officiated. After the couples were wed, Madonna made a grand entrance, looking like a whitewashed cowgirl, singing "Open Your Heart." This was the sort of inter-generational collaboration that stretched over more than one gulf.

As is often the case though, some of the pairings just seemed too forced. Sure Gary Clarke Jr. can rip on the guitar, but that doesn't mean he should be trading licks with Keith Urban. And why was Robin Thicke performing with Chicago? Did he promise his dad he'd do that as a Boxing Day gift? Why did Lang Lang perform with Metallica? Was somebody a beneficiary of the Make-a-Wish Foundation?

The grand finale rock jam with Nine Inch Nails, Queens of the Stone Age, Dave Grohl and Lindsey Buckingham was sloppy and loud, but it was fun.

One collaboration that worked especially well, however, was between two newer acts: Imagine Dragons and Kendrick Lamar doing a live mash-up of their respective hits, "Radioactive" and "Swimming Pool." Cannons full of smoke and fake blood blasted them as they swung mallets at enormous bass drums and inspired Lorde and Taylor Swift to dance (the latter, a feat that isn't that difficult at awards shows) and Steven Tyler to sing along.

A glam affair

The 2014 Grammy red carpet was all about shimmer.

1 Taylor Swift said her slinky gold lamé Gucci Premiere gown, with crystal gemstones, felt like "a suit of armor." Hear that haters/exes?

2 Rita Ora ditched the typical gown for a metallic Lanvin cocktail dress she described as "short, kinda cute and glitzy." We agree.

3 Don't let Madonna's black Ralph Lauren suit — picked out by her son, David — fool you. She brought the shimmer (and an interesting accent) with her grill.

4 Chrissy Teigen got the memo. The model stole the attention from hubby John Legend in her sexy strapless Johanna Johnson gown.

5 Watch out Olivia Wilde — mom-to-be Ciara looked radiant — and showed off her baby bump— in a custom gold beaded Emilio Pucci gown.

6 Katy Perry went really literal with a ladylike 2014 Valentino gown — fresh off the couture runway — featuring sheet music on the skirt. But that pageant hair, we just can't get behind.

No big deal?

Super Bowl Sunday's dangers

Super Bowl Sunday is to pathological gamblers what New Year's Eve is to alcoholics: It's exciting and everybody's doing it so it's easier to brush off big betting as no big deal. In addition to gambling on the winning team (odds are 50/50) or the final score, people wager on who wins the coin toss or even whether it will snow.

HARMLESS FUN OR A GAMBLING PROBLEM?

Every football season my husband disappears on Sunday and Monday evenings. I know he and his friends bet on fantasy football and playoff games. But last week I noticed $4,000 was missing from our joint account. With Super Bowl Sunday coming up, I'm worried. Does he have a gambling problem?

The fact is, if you think your loved one's gambling is a problem, it is. / FUSE

I know as much about sports gambling as I do about root canals. So to thoughtfully answer your question, I turned to Jim Maney, executive director of the New York Council on Problem Gambling. His response: "If you think it's an issue, it's an issue."

According to the Diagnostic Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, the virtual bible of the mental health profession, a person can be diagnosed with a gambling disorder if he or she meets at least five of these criteria over a 10-month period:

1 Feels a need to gamble with increasing amounts of money in order to achieve the desired excitement.

2 Experiences restlessness or irritability when attempting to cut down or stop gambling.

3 Has made repeated unsuccessful efforts to control, cut back or stop gambling.

4 Is preoccupied with gambling (e.g., having persistent thoughts of reliving past gambling experiences, handicapping or planning the next venture, thinking of ways to get money with which to gamble).

5 Often gambles when feeling distressed (e.g., helpless, guilty, anxious, depressed).

6 After losing money gambling, often returns another day to get even ("chasing" one's losses).

7 Lies to conceal the extent of involvement with gambling.

8 Has jeopardized or lost a significant relationship, job or educational or career opportunity because of gambling.

9 Has relied on others to provide money to relieve desperate financial situations caused by gambling.

Unlike drinking, however, disordered gambling may not be immediately obvious to loved ones. Many consider their boyfriend's, girlfriend's or spouse's betting as enjoyable pastimes. Many gamblers are nonplussed when they don't have enough money for groceries because they assume that it's par for the course and they'll eventually make up for their losses.

According to Maney, it's not until the consequences become extreme — for example, their bank accounts get depleted, or they lose their houses — that compulsive gamblers and their families realize the extent of the problem.

If you think your husband has a problem, you can call the New York Council on Public Gambling, Gamblers Anonymous or Gam-Anon, which provides support to families of compulsive gamblers. Good luck.

GETTING TIME ON YOUR SIDE

Buckling down and focusing your job search will improve your results and leave more time for the rest of life. / MOODBOARD RF

Working out at the gym with only 20 minutes on the clock means pounding that Stairmaster like there's no tomorrow. Well, compare that to a 60-minute slow walk on the treadmill — there's no comparison. (And really, there's no workout.)

How you spend your time is more important than how much you have. This couldn't be truer with a job search. Instead of surfing endlessly for various opportunities and applying online, it's time to get in the zone. Get focused, limit your time and micromanage it to boost your productivity. For starters, you can eliminate applying to jobs on Saturdays and do it on Mondays instead. (And how much fun is it to look for a job during the weekend? Our thoughts exactly.)

According to Bright.com, the best day of the week to apply online is Monday. After analyzing more than 500,000 job applications, the job seeker site found that at least 30 percent of job seekers moved onto the next round on a Monday. (The least successful day was Saturday).

Early in the week bodes well for emails as well. According to email marketing firm Constant Contact, Monday is emerging as a day with better-than-average open rates. Email volume is at its peak from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., so in order to avoid getting lost in the inbox, the best time to send is early in the morning or in the evening, especially if you're networking.

In addition to knowing when to apply and network via email, a focused search involves knowing which jobs and companies to pursue and how many is too many. Job seekers may think casting a wide net may bode well, but in many instances it's futile.

When recruiters review candidates' profiles in their company's applicant tracking system (better known as the "black hole" where online résumés are submitted), they can see all of the jobs you've applied to at that company. If they see 28, for example, they won't take you as seriously — you'll seem desperate and unfocused. How can anyone truly be a slam dunk hire for 28 different roles? Try applying to a few jobs so they'll see your specialized skill set and hone in on your CV.

Plus, following up is key to scoring the job, and how can you focus your efforts on 28 opportunities simultaneously? Narrow it down to the top two or three you're truly qualified for instead. It becomes unwieldy to sell yourself in an application binge. Instead, focus on the good stuff — the right jobs and the right companies.

Quoted

Whether you cast your net focusing on the same industry or the same role, marketing across a variety of organizational cultures and company sizes, the key is keeping it manageable so you can insert yourself and put your best foot forward.

Lunches meat their match

I would love my school to participate in Meatless Monday. I love my school, but I hate its lunch options. They are greasy and unhealthy, and I don't feel good about eating them. It would be such a great change to have one day a week where we have new and different foods to choose from. I personally try to eat healthy at home, and having more nutritious school lunches available would make a healthy lifestyle much easier to uphold. I care about my future and the future of my peers, and by bringing Meatless Monday into more schools, we could be a part of the progression toward a sustainable future. I love animals and care about how they are treated, and that is another reason I would love to try more meatless meals. I have heard that eating less meat and more vegetables also benefits the environment. So for my health, for animals and for the environment, I'm asking for Meatless Monday to come to my school.

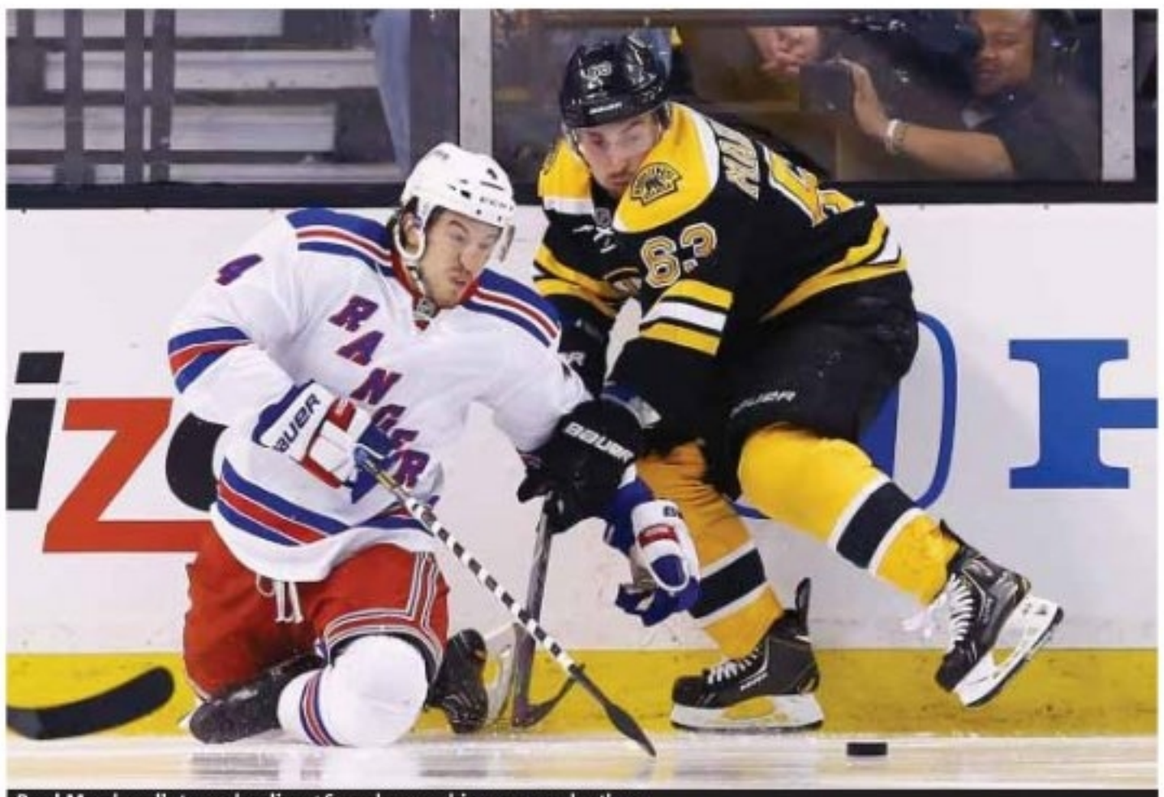
Marchand rides hot streak

NHL. The Bruins forward may not be the most intimidating player, but he is still giving opposing teams headaches this year.



Brad Marchand's team-leading 16 goals are a big reason why they are on top of the Atlantic Division with 67 points. / GETTY IMAGES

If you make a list of the most talented or valuable Bruins, odds are left-wing Brad Marchand would be far down the list in both cases. However, his importance to the B's cannot be overstated.

On a team full of serious professionals, Marchand always keeps it loose, as NESN's "Behind the B" reality show has shown in numerous episodes. Marchand is the fun-loving guy always in the middle of every joke and locker room prank.

Head coach Claude Julien often talks about the "good Brad" and the "bad Brad," so when Marchand's game is right, he becomes the biggest X-factor to Boston's success.

As backup goaltender Chad Johnson said after last week's win over Los Angeles, "Marsh has been awesome, you can see what type of player he is."

Julien added, "That's what confidence does, it gives [Marchand] more energy. He has great speed and control of his emotions, no panic. He's one of those guys with Patrice Bergeron that is a threat on the penalty kill and they keep the opposing power play on their heels. He's scored some big goals for us this season."

Now in his fourth full season with the Bruins, Boston has grown accustomed to Marchand's peaks and valleys. His skills don't jump off the ice at you and he's very small for an NHL winger. So when he's not moving his feet, or worse, losing his focus (46 penalty minutes), then he doesn't bring much to the B's.

At this moment, however, Marchand is playing his best hockey of the season. He is riding a five-game point streak (six goals, two assists) after an assist in Saturday's 6-1 win in Philadelphia.

"It's going to end at some point," Marchand admitted. "You have to stay even-keeled. Bergy gives me good chances on the penalty kill."

Marchand has an NHL-best four shorthanded goals.

Another season of playing with Bergeron has molded Marchand, who is tied for the team lead with 16 goals, into a more complete player. Newcomer Reilly Smith has also fit in seamlessly with Marchand and Bergeron on the second line. David Krejci, Milan Lucic and Jarome Iginla have been a great top line but the second line is right there with them in terms of consistency and production.

Nets beat Celtics in return to Boston for Pierce, Garnett

PAUL PIERCE GETTY IMAGES

The Garden showered Kevin Garnett and, especially, Paul Pierce with applause as they were announced before Sunday night's return to the city. But the duo, who led Boston to the 2008 NBA title, didn't allow their new team to take it easy on the current Celtics.

As for Pierce and Garnett themselves, well they struggled mightily in an 85-79 win by Brooklyn. Pierce scored just six points on 2-of-10 shooting and struggled with foul trouble. Garnett wasn't much better, with six points as well, though he took just six shots.

The second unit, led by Andray Blatche and Deron Williams, still returning from in jury, had 47 points for Brooklyn.

Jeff Green suffered through an equally terrible shooting performance as Pierce. He finished 2-of-13 (1-of-7 from 3-point range) for eight points.

Pierce, who spent the first 15 years of his career in Boston, didn't acknowledge the cheers before the game — though Garnett did. METRO

Shape and Health Supplement #5SH

The main ingredient is ocean kelp extract. This is the most effective botanical we know for reducing hunger in general especially for sweets of all kinds. This ocean kelp helps us to be more selective in eating more USDA recommended non-fattening alkaline food (vegetables, salads, legumes, fruit, berries, mushrooms) and decrease acidic food (meat, fish, shelfish, bread, noodles, rice, eggs, cheese, nuts, potatoes, french fries or other junk food). Just change a few eating habits for long term weight management. If your blood sugar is unbalanced consider adding Bell Blood Sugar Metabolism #40. It is hard to manage weight if the blood sugar is out of line.

■ It seemed to naturally curb my appetite. Bell Shape & Health gave me extra energy for workouts. I have managed my weight well for the last 3 months. I have recommended Bell Shape & Health to my family and friends. I will definitely keep on taking it. Latoya Daniela Scotte 29, Shuterville, SC.*

Clear Skin from within!

Bell Clear Skin (Bell Product #60) helps you maintain healthy skin from within, simply by cleansing the blood instead of attacking the skin topically with creams or washes. This only makes sense, since the skin is an elimination organ. Typically, you can see how it benefits your skin within days. Many people wrote that they were surprised how quickly they had amazing results. There are lots of testimonials from everyday people on our website.*

■ Last couple of years I tried everything. Results were unbelievable. I have beautiful skin again. Thanks for giving back my self-esteem. Nelisa Royer, 28, Doral, FL ■ My mom bought (Bell Product #60). I was skeptical. It did work quickly and better than anything else. Christopher Seraphin, 14, Brooklyn, NY. * ■ It worked. I no longer have to hide at home, because I was ashamed to be seen. Agnes Casillas, 60, New York, NY* ■ Can wear dresses again that are backless. My skin looks fantastic. Thank you from the bottom of my heart. Yvette Maclean, 40, Lodi, CA *
